Fog Postpones Flyers' Start

American 'Round the World Flyers Delayed a Day in Starting for Iceland—Unusual Dangers Cause Extraordinary Precautions Which May Insure Success.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
On board United States Cruiser Richmond, Houton Bay, off Scotland, July 31, (via radio to I. N. S.)—The flight of the United States Army "round-the-world" aviators from the Orkney Islands to Iceland was postponed today on account of heavy fog. The flyers hope to take off tomorrow morning if weather conditions are favorable.

The destroyer Billingsley reported heavy fog bank off the Faroe Islands in the direct line the aviators would have to travel to reach Iceland. This caused Lieutenant Smith to postpone hopping off until tomorrow.

"We have got this far and I do not want to take chances when a slight delay will insure success," said Smith.

The aviators spent the day visiting the wrecks of the German fleet which was sunk in Scapa flow.

Destroyers Stationed Along Route.

The distance from Kirkwall to Houton Bay, Iceland, is about 500 miles. Two United States destroyers, the Reid and Billingsley, are stationed between this port and the Icelandic coast.

Two stops are to be made at Iceland, the second being at Reykjavik. The cruiser Richmond, flagship of the guard flotilla, with Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder on board, will follow the flyers from Houton Bay.

Hourly reports on weather conditions were received on board the Richmond by wireless.

While the fog at dawn was so thick that visibility was extremely low, Lieutenant Smith and his companions said they believed they could fly over the mist rising to an altitude where it would be clear.

Admiral Magruder feared that the aviators would be taking too much risk to take off in the murky, foggy day.

Iceland Also Fog-enveloped.

Reports from Iceland said that fog was general in that district and that it would be dangerous to try to find the coast.

Realizing the dangers of the trans-Atlantic hop off to Iceland, the aviators took the utmost precautions for safety. In addition to fog, gales are frequent over the North Atlantic and the sea is filled with icebergs and fog.

The aviators planned to take carrier pigeons with them in the event they got out of touch with the convoying cruisers and destroyers. They will attempt to keep in communication with the ships by wireless.

Lieut. Erick Nelson said that the men did not fear the fog, but did not wish to take any chances that might appear foolhardy.

After the departure of the flyers, the Richmond will steam for Reykjavik, the second stop of the aviators upon the rocky, icebound island of Iceland.

All in Good Condition.

The aviators and their airplanes are in fine condition. The machines were carefully overhauled, it was found that the trip up the coast from Brough had not strained any of the parts.

A considerable crowd were on the shore at daybreak to see the aviators off. They listened in vain for the roar of the motors as they peered through the misty weather into Houton Bay.

Flying boats cruised back and forth in the bay while boyish sailors on board the Richmond leaned along the deck rails watching the planes.

The Danish cruiser Gertrud Rask was reported today to have reached Greenland to cooperate with the American ships in patrolling the flight route.

Mail Robber Shot to Death

Early Morning Attempt to Steal $35,000. Frustrated by Cool-headed Mail Clerk who Shot and Killed the Robber.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
East Orange, N. J., July 31.—A robber was shot to death here today while trying to seize a mail pouch believed to contain about $35,000 in Federal Reserve Bank funds on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railway station. Another robber escaped in a taxi-cab.

Eugene Stack, a young mail clerk, whose coolness and courage prevented the robbery, was shot in the leg before he shot and killed the robber.

The attempted robbery took place at five o'clock.

An early morning train had dumped the mail sacks and bundles of newspapers upon the station platform just a short time before the two robbers appeared. There were five pouches on the platform, mostly filled with valuable registered mail.

The two robbers, well dressed and wearing cloth caps, alighted from the train when it stopped at the station. They stroled towards the mail car, attracting little attention from the few employees upon the platform.

Stack, who is only 22 years old and has been in the employ of the railway less than a year, picked up the sacks and began to pile them on an elevator.

The two men approached him, both drawing revolvers.

"Give us the one with the money in it," growled one of the robbers.

Without replying Stack drew his own revolver and began firing at the men. The robbers opened fire at the same time. One bullet grazed Stack's hand and another entered his leg.

The robbers taking fright, began to back away. As they did so, one of them fell with a bullet through his body. His corpse rolled down the station stairs. He was dead when the police arrived.

No Action Yet on County's Request

Governor Smith Not Expected to Consider Ulster County's Request for Extraordinary Term of Court to Determine Appeal Which Now Lies Up Highway Moneys.

The request of County Attorney John W. Eckert directed to Governor Smith, asking that the appellate division of the supreme court, third judicial district, be convened in extraordinary session to decide the appeal filed by Arthur S. Brant, state commissioner of highways, from the ruling of Judge C. D. B. Hasbrouck which directed the state superintendent of public works and the state commissioner of highways to release state moneys for highway work in Ulster county, has reached the office of Governor Smith.

Colonel Greene, head of the highway department, in a statement given out to the press reviewed the case, but added nothing new to the facts.

Governor Smith, who is absent from Albany, will not take up the matter until his return to Albany next week.

The request of Mr. Eckert was received at the office of Governor Smith on Wednesday afternoon, according to statements given out at Albany. If the letter was not received until Wednesday of this week, somebody ought to start an investigation to learn why the governor's mail is not delivered at his office more promptly. In the ordinary transmission of mail it should have reached the governor's office at the capitol on Wednesday, July 23.

Summon Germans If Allies Agree

But Premier MacDonald Wants to Wait Until Such Time Before Bringing in Germany to Sign Agreement—Conference Still Debatable.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, July 31.—The Allied Reparation Conference again swung perilously near the shoals of disaster today.

Committees number one and number three took up the French proposals for safeguarding the holders of German loan bonds while the members of the Inter-Allied Reparation Commission met informally. The commissioners are here to sign an agreement with Germany but Premier Ramsay MacDonald does not want to summon the Germans to London until the Allies have agreed among themselves.

It was reported that Premier Herriot of France, is threatening to return home unless the French proposals are accepted. But it is generally believed if the proposals are rejected both Colonel J. A. Logan, the American official observer, and Premier Theunis of Belgium, will step in with a new compromise to keep the conference alive.

The British object to the French attempt to keep deliveries in kind. They do not want the French to have latitude for amending the Dawes plan.

There was lively debate behind closed doors during the day.

A spokesman for the British delegation said that England must agree to the French proposals "which would be a great step forward."

Members of the British delegation said they were hopeful that the British objections would be overcome within the next day or two.

Hold 2 for Long Island R. R. Wreck

One Killed and Forty Injured in Railroad Wreck When Passenger Coach Jumped Track—Switch Moved Before Train Had Passed.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, July 31.—Two employees of the Long Island railroad were arrested today in connection with the wreck in the Sunnyside Yards, Long Island City yesterday, in which one person was killed and forty injured. They are James J. Moor, locomotive helper, of 18 Pierce street, Rahway, N. J., and Alfred C. Hunt, a tower man.

Moor, it is charged, caused two cars of a ten-car train to be derailed when he threw a switch before the train had completely passed. Two cars were overturned amid the screams of the passengers.

Miss Walburta Buck, 50, of 287 Barclay street, Flushing, died in New York hospital an hour after the wreck. Her father, Henry Buck, 85, was not told of his daughter's death.

One of the cars was derailed when it jumped the track and crashed into an electric locomotive on an other track. The passengers were pinned underneath the seats and cut by flying glass as the car overturned. Many had to be pulled from the wreckage.

Ambulances were rushed to the scene and took the injured to hospitals. Crowds gathered and aided in rescue work. Traffic on the railroad was delayed for an hour.

Mayor Hylan took charge of the investigation of the wreck. He questioned Moor, who denied he had thrown the switch.

Hunt, the tower man, who lives at 75 Farringham street, Flushing, was arrested with Moor on a technical charge of homicide. It is alleged Hunt controlled the switch from the signal tower.

Moor's statements were conflicting, police said. He said he had ordered the switch released, but later declared it had been released accidentally.

Fifty feet of track were torn up.

In Mitigation Or Aggravation?

Judge Caverly Intimates Mitigation Is Not Only Question Involved in Alienists' Testimony—Court May Consider Aggravation.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Criminal Court Room, Chicago, July 31.—The legal battle over whether alienists are to be permitted to testify that Nathan Leopold, Jr., and "Dickie" Loeb are afflicted with "functional mental diseases," even though not insane, waxed hotter and hotter in Judge John R. Caverly's court today where the blithe young collegians are on trial for their lives for the kidnapping and slaying of little Bobby Franks.

Several times Judge Caverly indicated that he was tired of the argument and that he was not going to change his decision that the psychiatrists should be allowed to give their testimony "for what it is worth" but the state's attorneys continued doggedly and persistently to prove to him by precedents and authorities that his decision was wrong and unprecedented.

Darrow Suggests Time Limit.

Darrow, for the defense, suggested that Judge Caverly put a time limit "on all this."

"I suggest a time limit be fixed, your honor," he said, then turning to the state's attorneys, went on, "you have not yet cited one case in point here to sustain your contention. You can read authorities from now till dooms day it won't mean anything unless you cite something to the point."

Judge Caverly Remains Calm.

Assistant State's Attorney Marshall objected testily and Judge Caverly sneered it over by saying:

"Whenever the court is sufficiently enlightened, it will say."

Dr. William A. White, the Washington psychiatrist, took the witness stand again at the opening of the session. He can't testify until the lawyers are through wrangling. He sat and read some legal looking papers and paid no attention to monotonous reading of authorities.

Occasionally the defense attorneys, interrupted Marshall with observations that this and that was not applicable in Illinois, or with reiterated claims that "that deals with insanity," which they contended is not an issue here. Judge Caverly listened quietly to the exchanges. The spectators looked bored.

Mitigation or Aggravation.

The state continued to accuse the defense of seeking to set up a defense of insanity under long winding, scientific names.

Depravity of character and abandoned habits are not evidence of insanity," read Assistant State Attorney Marshall from a huge volume of Illinois Supreme court decisions.

"Even so," broke in Judge Caverly, "is that any reason why the court should not hear evidence of depravity of character and abandoned habits, either in aggravation of the crime on the state's side or in mitigation of the punishment on the side of the defense?"

"We have eliminated here the question of insanity and nothing bearing on the insanity of these defendants will be permitted to go in."

"How are you going to prove depravity and habits by these so-called experts?" demanded State Attorney Crowe.

"It is perfectly apparent that the defense is not calling these alienists to prove depravity. They are going to testify to a lot of hearsay conversations, etc., on which they have constructed theories as to their mental condition and their responsibility for this crime."

Can't Decide Until He Hears.

Judge Caverly placidly reiterated that it was entirely problematical anyway what effect the testimony of the scientists would have.

"I may strike it all out," he said, "or none at all, or part of it. But I cannot tell whether it is admissible evidence until I know what it is."

Clarence Darrow, chief of defense, broke in and said to Crowe:

"When you were a judge on the bench, Mr. Crowe, did you not hear evidence of insanity in a plea of guilty to first degree murder? How about the alienists who testified in the Fitzgerald case?"

"He merely testified that the man was a burglar," retorted Crowe, "but Fitzgerald was sentenced to hang and was hanged, too."

What Alienists Say.

"Alienists tell me," declared Assistant State's Attorney Marshall, "that seventy per cent of all the cases admitted to our asylums are afflicted with a mental disease, functional in character."

Marshall went on and again reiterated that at the first question of the sanity or insanity of Loeb and Leopold, "the common law of Illinois commands that a jury be called."

They wrangled and wrangled, going over the same ground they went over yesterday. Darrow and Crowe shouted at each other.

Judge Caverly finally stopped it. "Oh, go on with your argument," he said to the state's attorneys, and Marshall then resumed the reading of the law books and decisions from many courts in many states.

One Definition of Sanity.

Marshall did not stay on this side of the Atlantic for his precedents and authorities. He went into English law and explained its definition of sanity and insanity. He said some authorities had divided insanity into

New Klan Riots In Massachusetts

Klan Opened Fire on Hecklers With Revolvers and Rifles—Officers of the Law Gather in Clubs. Black-jacks and Guns From Rioters.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Haverhill, Mass., July 31.—Five men are known to have suffered gunshot wounds in two new outbreaks of violence between members of the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klansmen here and at Groveland early today. Numerous other participants in the mob warfare were injured by stones and clubs.

Three of the men shot were found to be so seriously injured that they were operated upon immediately at the Gale hospital.

The three young men taken to the Gale hospital are Edward Lucey, Frank Cotter and James Connelly, all of Haverhill. They were so severely injured in the legs by bullets that physicians say they will remain in the hospital at least a week. The trio is technically under arrest. The injured men claim they had accepted a ride in the machine of James Culbert of Haverhill when a truck owned by M. O. Luce of the same city loaded with Klansmen passed and opened fire. Police say the three were unarmed.

Luce and six of his companions, R. O. Gould, Walter Foster, Arthur H. Low, Harold Perkins, P. B. Spofford and Harold C. Caswell, all Haverhill men, were arrested by members of the state constabulary, charged with disturbing the peace, because of the antagonistic gathering at the jail of anti-Klansmen. Police Captain Marcus A. Sullivan detailed a guard to protect the seven and take them to their homes instead of bringing them to the jail. A small arsenal was taken from the truck.

Sixteen shot guns, several revolvers, a large quantity of ammunition, iron bars, lead pipes, blackjacks and clubs were taken from the alleged Klansmen arrested. According to the police there was an open display of arms by the Klansmen as they left the meeting place.

The meeting was said to be the largest Klan gathering in the history of the state. About 5,000 members assembled on the farm of Clarence Hardy at Groveland. It was not until the Klansmen crossed the Merrimac river to Haverhill that serious violence occurred. Three members of the Klan opened fire with rifles and revolvers on the hecklers, who retaliated with rocks and clubs.

When the Klansmen at Groveland ended the Klansmen formed a military procession on foot, only the drivers of the thousand odd automobiles riding. The marchers apparently were anxious to impress their antagonists with the completeness of their equipment for they carried rifles, shotguns and revolvers openly. When Main street, Haverhill, was reached the Klansmen took seats in the automobiles and it was then the affair took on a serious aspect. Many shots were fired and the air was filled with flying missiles. Countless windshields were broken and other damage inflicted on the automobiles.

A squad with brooms marched ahead of the Klan cars, sweeping the roadway clear of nails and glass.

When the police feared a loss of life was imminent, 12 men, all heavily armed, were arrested.

Twenty-two arrests have been announced by the local police and state constabulary.

The police say that although five persons were said to have suffered gunshot wounds they have records of only the three in this hospital.

The five men suffering from gunshot wounds all claim to be opponents of the hooded order.

The police made about a score of arrests. All taken into custody, they say, are Klansmen.

Members of the state constabulary, sheriffs, and deputies and local police are attempting to prevent a further outbreak.

TELLS WONDERS OF WIND CAVE

Hay Fever and Asthma Sufferers Find Instant Relief at National Park.

Washington.—Wind Cave, one of the least known of the American national parks, in which sufferers from hay fever and asthma get instant relief, is described in a bulletin of the national park service of the Department of the Interior. The belief that the park was discovered by a farmer while stalking deer in 1891 is made known. The discoverer was attracted by a loud, weird whistling coming from a hole in a rock not more than eight inches in diameter, which was later enlarged by blasting, and now forms the present entrance to the cave.

Several theories are advanced as to the beneficial effect of the cave on hay fever and asthma, one being that it is due to the entire absence of vegetation in the cave and the other that it is because of the remarkably even temperature, which is never below 43 degrees nor above 47 degrees during the year. Still another theory is that there is an unknown ingredient in the air of the cave.

The Wind Cave national park, with an area of 10,522 acres, was created in 1903. Chief interest in Wind Cave lies in the masses of calcite, aragonite and quartz, and in the geodes, stalactites, stalagmites and a peculiar box-work formation. At one point two geodes of large dimensions, which stand side by side, practically touching one another, differ so greatly in structure and content that they are believed to have been created thousands of years apart.

"Pop-Corn" and "Snowballs." The walls and ceilings of the numerous passages and chambers in the cave are covered with formations of a remarkable nature. Describing them in a letter to the national park service, a visitor to the cave wrote:

"The pop-corn formation looks indeed like a lot of well-popped corn fastened to the walls and ceilings of the cave. In places the balls are smaller than peas, in others they are several times as large. The formation is pure white without the brilliancy that makes frostwork dazzle the eye. Akin to the pop-corn effect is the snowball. In various parts of the cave the walls and ceilings look as if boys had been snowballing them with balls just wet enough to stick and spatter.

"The frostwork forms the chief beauty of the cave. It is formed in the softest rock and in the upper parts of the cave. It is suspended or shoots up and out of the limestone in clusters of white tiny needles formed of infinitesimal crystals resembling pine clusters. The coarsest threads are not larger than needles, and they decrease in size until the formation resembles the finest cotton. Some of it, called mineral cotton by the guide, would deceive anyone away from the cave. One section of it, which has been named 'Noah's Beard,' is several feet long and white as snow."

The Wind Cave national park is situated in the Black Hills of southwestern Dakota, 12 miles north of Hot Springs. The cave is believed to have served at one time as channels for subterranean waters which now follow other courses. The outlet probably is in the great spring at the upper end of Buffalo Gap, a few miles to the eastward, where the land is about 800 feet lower than the lowest part of the cave yet explored.

The cave illustrates not only the results of the solvent action of water on limestone, but also the redeposition of calcium carbonate of the limestone, forming the stalactites and various deposits on the walls. The boxwork, which is a characteristic feature of Wind Cave, was produced by the water depositing calcium carbonate in small cracks in the limestone of such a character that when the rock crumbled out, thin rectangular walls of the deposit remained.

The water which formed the caverns ago came to the surface through cracks which are now mostly covered by the earth washed into them. One of these which remained open led to the discovery of the cave. At times the continuous air current, which gives the cave its name, moves from higher to lower levels and blows out at the entrance openings. At other times the movement is in the contrary direction.

Wind Cave Game Preserve. The Wind Cave national game preserve was established in the west corner of the park by congress in 1912 to provide a suitable home for a herd of buffalo presented to the government by the American Bison society. This preserve, occupying more than one-third of the park area, was chosen as the one best adapted as a refuge for the various species of big game native to the region.

The location on the southern slope of the Black Hills was selected primarily because of its moderate elevation, comparatively mild winters, and abundance of feed. The fact that a famous wintering place of the buffalo was situated near Buffalo Gap aided in the choice. The tract is adapted not only for buffalo, but for elk, mule and white-tailed deer, antelope and possibly mountain sheep. The stretches of grazing land in the open groves of yellow pine forest form a picturesque feature of the higher ground in the park, while the timber in the small canyons affords shelter to the game during severe storms.

Watermelons. The melancholy days are come, The melons are on ice, It takes a most prodigious sum, To even buy a slice.

Ah, well do I recall the time, When melons were a plenty; We bought the small ones for a dime, The big ones sold for twenty.

To raise them though we used a plan And take up a collection, But now it costs an iron man, To buy a quarter section.

We've found what's good for children at last. Campers.

A blind peddler on a downtown corner unguardedly remarked out loud the other day that his sensitive nature has been shocked much more severely by the daring sleeveless gowns this summer than he ever was by the short skirts of yesterday. Blindness evidently is not always the misfortune we have been led to believe.

"Cold Wave" is general, says the weather bureau. And, evidently, generally satisfactory. We haven't heard a single complaint—even from the ice man.

Why is it that the woman with seven children always decides to do her travelling in August.

With dandelions in the spring and wire grass in the late summer, the man with a lawn may be pardoned for fits of depression.

All the world's a stage, all right, but most of us are only props.

Last summer's pink knees have changed to gray elbows.

The fellow who never felt the need of a vacation is beginning to weaken.

A Home Run. I played golf yesterday for the first time.

How did you make out? Fine! Made a home run right at the start. I batted the ball into the tall grass in left field and ran around the entire course before I found it.

The fellow who has been cussing the man next door all summer for snoring so loudly out on the sleeping porch, feels now that he owes the man an apology. After kissing his wife a fond good-bye, the neighbor left Saturday on a short business trip and the snoring continued that night and the next.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

THE JESUITS.

The Society of Jesus, otherwise known as the Order of Jesuits, was founded by Ignatius Loyola, afterwards canonized by the Roman Catholic Church. Saint Ignatius died on this date in the year 1556.

Loyola was a page to Ferdinand V. of Spain, and afterwards a soldier. Having been wounded in both legs at the siege of Pampeluna in 1521, he was removed after the battle to the castle to recuperate, and during the long period of inaction he read the lives of the saints to the end that when he recovered he renounced the military for the ecclesiastical profession, and began the long course of studies to fit himself for his great task. Dedicating himself to the Blessed Virgin as her knight, he made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and on his return in 1554, laid the foundation of the great order in Paris. Chastity, poverty, obedience and implicit submission to the Holy See were required of all candidates for membership in the Society of Jesus. Pope Paul III. confirmed the constitution by a Bull issued in 1540. Originally the order was not to exceed sixty, but that restriction was afterwards removed and the preaching, teaching and missionary work of the order has been carried to every part of the globe.

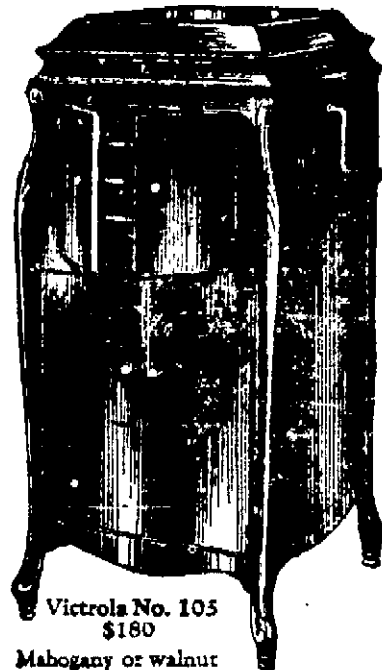

MRS. HENDEE.

When Royalton, Vt., was burned by the Indians in 1776, Mrs. Roger Hendee, a native of that place, gave proof of remarkable courage. The attack by the Indians was sudden and her husband being absent, and she being in the field, the Indians seized her children and carried them off.

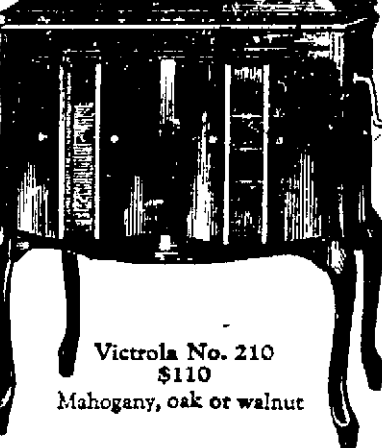

When she learned this she immediately set out for the camp of the Indians, and despite threats of death, she persevered in her supplications for the release of her children until the Indians finally granted her request. After taking the little ones to safety she returned to the Indian camp and induced the chief to release all other children that had been carried off. The In-

The Victor Company could not keep on presenting week after week the art of the greatest singers and instrumentalists unless Victor products had unusual merit. Nothing but perfect reproduction of the high art they have achieved through years of devotion and work satisfies these famous artists. No other records present such an array of great music and famous artists, such infinite variety of entertainment; and the Victrola is the one instrument on which the great artists test and approve their own records.

Delicate Frocks for Summer Wear

Cours of Lace Have Again Sprung Into Popularity.

Lace is one element in the subject of dress that needs no urging. The very word conveys the idea of luxury, refinement, of elegance. As a mode of adornment, it is accepted and accepted in cycles. It was accepted years ago as the proper trimming for every dress occasion, and everybody that aspired to be anybody bought, inherited or otherwise acquired fine lace.

Every woman of fashion had collars, bertha, flounces of lace. The frocks of children of the affluent were trimmed with sheer valenciennes, downy shawls and other rare variety, and a bride who had family tradition was expected to display its evidence in a wedding veil of old lace.

Then, wearying of the usual, the women of fashion used no lace, or almost none, for season after season.

One reason was, perhaps, that the old sort was incongruous with modern dress, and little that was new came out. Another was the extreme simplicity of the styles that have been the rage until just lately. Now, because women are bored with severity and uncolored plainness, lace has come back "strong."

The vogue has been growing for three seasons and has engaged the talent of some of the leading artists of Paris, whose lace gowns are achievements made possible by the great variety of charming novelty and the revival of some of the beautiful old types, real and imitation. Spanish, Bohemian, chintilly, shadow lace are popular for entire gowns, in combination with the material, and some particularly charming models have been established by prominent modistes for summer afternoon and evening gowns. Tulle net and chiffon have been almost entirely superseded by the new lace gowns, and some important styles of striking character have been received by exclusive shops in New York.

White Lace Gowns.
In white the lace gowns are enchanting, particularly in Spanish, Bohemian or chintilly, the craze for which has not lessened. Nothing, after all, approaches chintilly in beauty and decorative quality, and an evening dress of white chintilly is the very quintessence of daintiness.

A three-piece costume presented by Doucet as one of his season's successes is built on a foundation of ivory tulle de chine. The gown is of the plain crepe, simply made and slightly flared by being caught up with a cluster of small tucks over each hip. It is bound at the neck, which is bound simply with the material, and it is sleeveless.

The coat, seven-eighths length, is straight and has around the bottom a heavy applique ivory lace, with which also the straight coat sleeves are finished. A narrow collar of white fox adds a touch of importance to this charming ensemble.

In addition to the conventional black or white in gowns of lace, some new things have been successfully presented, illustrating the artistic possibilities of the colored laces. A dream of by some of the best houses, are a joy. There are beautiful examples of duchesse, rose point, point d'Alencon, point de Venise, point applique, in graceful shaped berthas, cape collars and straight. Valenciennes is seen somewhat, but more than anything on lingerie, baby clothes and for trimming bodice trappings.

The linen lace, flit most of all, are now seen almost exclusively. The modistes of this side who copy French fashions are expecting a still greater vogue for lace in next winter's styles.

Metal Lace on Evening Gowns.
Metal lace is seen on some of the evening gowns. Redfern, for example, has designed a stunning dinner gown which will answer as well for dancing. The dress itself is made of liberty satin, sheathlike, decollete and sleeveless. At the line of the knee is applied a circular flounce in silver where it meets the satin, or silver guipure lace over chiffon.

Another luscious thing is an evening gown of Beers' designing, in rose-colored chiffon beaded in crystal. The beading is done in narrow strips from neck to hem, each finished just below the knee with long tasseled drops, over a circular flounce of the chiffon, of which is made also a long scarf, attached to the skirt at the back and long enough to be carried over the arms and shoulders.

The headed gowns rival in favor the new styles in colored laces which women are finding to be most complementary to figure and complexion. The laces, softly tinted golden brown, veiling the slips of ivory, peach or yellow, are indescribably delicate, with a cobwebby effect, and are even more elegant than the black lace—especially in the warm weather evening models.

Doucet has made for midsummer wear several of these tinted lace gowns. One of cocoa color, very sheer, tells an apricot-colored satin slip and has touches of gold lace introduced in the bodice and the slightly draped skirt. A large gold rose is attached at one side, where the skirt is lifted at the hip line.

Silver gray silk lace over aquamarine satin is a beautifully conceived combination that suggests moonlight on a summer sea. The colors run the scale in shades of ecru, beige, brown, gray, tangerine, blue and even bright scarlet, in the new laces offered in the best shops.

It is in the scarf that lace is most happily used, and the ideas expressed in the arrangement of a lace scarf in the drapery of a gown are many and charming.

Summer Silhouette Is Straight and Slender

The summer silhouette remains straight and slender but is gradually discarding its simplicity, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. A charming evening model is developed in brilliant cerise crepe and is embroidered with red crystal beads and imitation seed pearls. This embroidery follows the lines that swathe the figure and ripple off into borders which outline a series of scant flounces. A beautiful flower in mauve and cerise tones marks the rendezvous for the numerous ripples of an intricate outline.

Full-length, tight fitting sleeves are a characteristic of the mid-season evening dresses for semi-formal occasions. Ruby red fulgurant is the most modish fabric for these frocks which are entirely devoid of any trimming detail, the straight, chemise line is often broken by scarf-like draperies which cross the front and then disappear in flowing Oriental lines, giving somewhat the effect of the harem skirt. Such dresses are betimes and formless though revealing every curve of the figure. The decollete is of square outline.

Unmistakably of Paris

Simple in line but exquisite in color and handwork are tiny little frocks of batiste in the most ravishing colors. They are for the child just beyond babyhood and are daintily embroidered in self-color or white and pressed into fine plaits.

Gray Lace Over Mauve Satin, With Sash.

A gown is made of gray lace over a slip of mauve satin, to which is added a sash of powder blue satin ribbon with a bow and long ends directly in front.

Doucet has illustrated in one of his latest creations the charm of silver gray satin over black satin, and another successful combination is achieved by Berthe Hermance with ecru lace over flesh-colored crepe marocain, with a lace shawl applique, and draped in most effectively.

An effort is made by some prominent couturiers to bring Irish lace back into favor. It is chic and smart, as always, on linen frocks. Summer silks, crepes and velvets, as collars, yokes, cuffs or trimmings, and some of the new patterns are lovely. But the present styles in gowns are too soft for Irish lace and the lighter more cobwebby laces are preferred. The real laces in flounces, wide and narrow and in "sets," now being shown

All Help Unfortunate

A singular custom prevails among the Tartars or Kurds. If a man loses his cattle or other property he pours a little brown sugar into a piece of colored cloth, ties it up, and carries one such parcel to each of his friends and acquaintances. In turn he is presented, according to circumstances, with a cow or sheep or a sum of money.

Walnut Not "English"

"WHO'S WHO" IN AMERICA.

Many Europeans of the immigrant type think wistfully of America not only because they hope to prosper here but because they are under the impression that there are no class distinctions and that all are "equal" under the Stars and Stripes. "Who's Who in America," the latest edition of which has just been published, could serve to modify such a view. Even in a political democracy education, occupation and superior abilities—to say nothing of wealth or ancestry—inevitably bring about division into groups more or less sharply defined. We have not merely the "society" circles in every community of size but the group drawn from the country as a whole includes the more than ordinarily successful in the various arts and professions.

The American "Who's Who" for 1924-1925 shows that out of a population of more than a hundred millions only 25,337 men and women have gained more than local distinction or notability through the achievements chronicled in their brief biographies. Still more restricted would be a list of the permanently notables or famous, for no few of the names in the volume are as ephemeral as the official positions now occupied. It is significant that 70 per cent of the "eminent" persons in "Who's Who" were the sons and daughters of professional or business men, while less than twenty-five per cent were farmers' children, less than one per cent the children of unskilled laborers, and few whose parents were foreign born. In America, as in Europe, it is reserved for but a relatively small number to rise above the general level, and in this particular there is no such thing as equality.

SPORT AND "PATRIOTISM"

The behavior of a lower element in the French crowds toward foreign winners has led to the conclusion in some quarters that international Olympic games tend to prevent rather than to foster good feeling between nations. This view is based on the assumption that such unsportsmanlike elements are generally representative. It takes no account of the fact that education in fair play and tolerance is still needed in all countries, and it ignores the fact that with too many of the unintelligent everywhere "patriotism" largely consists in an unfriendly attitude toward foreigners. This is true to some extent even of Great Britain and the United States. We also have an element in sporting crowds unwilling to tolerate victory by a foreigner. It is on record that the French boxer Criqui was unmercifully hissed and booed in this country solely on account of his nationality, and we read that only the other day there were "galling displays of patriotic partisanship" at the expense of brave and gentlemanly Carpenter, who fought a losing game with superb pluck.

In spite of such unsportsmanlike displays of chauvinistic partisanship, of which elements are guilty, Col. Robert M. Thompson, president of the American Olympic committee, insists that friendly athletic feeling among nations has been cemented by the Olympiad held in Paris this year. No doubt he is right, and that there is every reason to continue these interesting international contests. Those whose "patriotism" checks the growth of the true spirit of sport are not widely representative and will be even less so as time goes on.

AN IDEAL NATIONAL PARK.

The bill introduced in the last session of Congress to make a national park of the Great Smoky Mountains failed of consideration, temporarily at least, but the proposition is one to commend itself to those who know something of the region named. Though of great height, these mountains of the Southern Appalachians are green-clothed to their tops with dense forest of the greatest variety of timber, are the almost undisturbed home of deer, bear, trout and bass, and in season are gay with rhododendron and azalea blooms. In the Great Smokies there are 18 peaks ranging in height from 6,000 to 6,800 feet. Clingman's Dome, the highest, is only 31 feet lower than Mount Mitchell in the Asheville district of North Carolina, the highest mountain east of the Rockies. Most of the other peaks, with such little known names as Richland Balsam, Water Rock Knob, Cold Spring Knob, Lone Bald, and Rough Butt Bald, are higher than Mount Washington in New Hampshire.

The inhabitants and scenery of this most remote section of the Southern Appalachians have perhaps been best described in the romances of Charles Egbert Craddock. As a wild region ideal for exploring, camping, hunting and fishing, the Great Smokies offer more than any other section of the Eastern States. But in no great while these virgin forests rich in hardwoods will be despoiled unless Congress should intervene to save them for a national park.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

YOUR BEST.

A speaker said a very significant thing recently.

"The greatest enemy of the 'best' is the 'good'."

You are born with a good mentality, a good mind, and as you journey through public and high school, perhaps through the university, you are able to get by because you have a "good" mind.

If you are not a hard worker, nor ambitious you "get along" fairly well because you have this "good" mind. What you could do were you to do your very best with that good mind is not for me to say.

But what about that body of yours?

Your folks gave you a "good" body. You were able to attend school regularly, to play the games of childhood and youth because your parents gave you a "good" body.

You were satisfied to be on the team or one of the spares, even if you were not a star at the game.

And now you are into manhood and womanhood, what about it? Oh well you have pretty good health, an occasional headache, a little tendency to constipation, a bit tired toward evening, but still you have "good" health.

You are at your work every day. You go out evenings although you're a little tired the next morning.

You think you can really say that you are in "good" health.

It is just here that I want to remind you of the words I quoted above. "The greatest enemy of the 'best' is the 'good'."

If you are satisfied with just "good" health and you are young or middle aged, can't you see what you are missing when you don't try to attain your "best"?

You have a "good" body, a sound constitution, why not get all it can give you, that is not just your "good" but your "best"?

You have really no excuse for not being at your best. And falling away from the standard is your fault and yours only.

For one who is constitutionally sound not to attain his real "best" health is not only wrong, but actually foolish.

Why with the start you have of a "good" body, and "good" health you have ninety per cent of the job done for you.

Why not get that other ten per cent by going into the matter of the little things that are keeping you from attaining par.

A little thinking on your part, perhaps a little chat with your doctor, and the exercise of a little will power will give you what you are entitled to—your best.

HOW

FIRE-WALKERS TRAVERSE HOT STONES UNHARMED.

The rite of fire-walking, known among the natives of Tahiti as "umutu," is described and explained in a pamphlet issued by the American Museum of Natural History.

The ceremony is performed by a priest for the purpose of insuring good crops, and consists of walking several times with naked feet over a bed of stones which have been heated until red by a fire from beneath. A shallow pit, two feet deep, is dug. Wood is placed in the bottom of the pit and on it are arranged about 200 round stones in two or three layers. Wood is lighted and burned about four hours beneath the stones until they are glowing.

The priest appears bearing a large spray of ti leaves in his hands. He passes about the fire, uttering a sort of incantation for protection; then, beating the nearest stones three times with the ti leaves, proceeds with due dignity, but it must be admitted, rather hurriedly, over the center of the pile. As he walks he is followed by those disciples who have courage to make the attempt under his directions.

The spectacle of the fire-walker is a very interesting one, inasmuch as an apparent impossibility is performed with such evident lack of injury.

A close examination, however, showed that the stones used were basalt, of volcanic origin, the most noticeable feature of which is its non-conductibility. It was found that a stone could be heated red-hot at one end while the other end remained comparatively cool. However, this feature does not appear to trouble the native, who regards the ceremony with the greatest reverence.

How Deadly Mosquito Spreads Yellow Fever

Details of the life of the only species of mosquito which has been shown to transmit yellow fever have been bared by a government scientist. It is a small form, well known in the tropics and is strikingly marked. Its long association with man is shown by many of its habits. The insect approaches stealthily from behind, retreats upon the slightest alarm and usually attacks the undersides of the hands or wrists. It gives no warning, whereas other mosquitoes have a piping or humming note. The pest hides wherever it can, concealing itself in garments, working into pockets and under lapels of coats, and crawling up under the clothes to bite its victim. Popular Mechanics Magazine.

How Clearing House Works

The operations of the New York clearing house are exactly the same in principle as those of a bank clearing house, with the exception that stock certificates are exchanged (cleared), instead of checks and drafts. A sheet is made out by each member and presented to the clearing house every day before 7 p. m. On one side is entered the list of stocks to be delivered and their full market value, and on the other side is entered the list of stocks to be received and their full market value.

How Dog Aided Criminals

Dogs are easier to teach than most animals, and for that reason are favorites with criminals. A couple of pickpockets owned an enormous mastiff which they trained to dash up to anyone whom they indicated and, apparently with a playful bound, knock him over. The two would rush up and, with profuse apologies for their dog's carelessness, raise the fallen person from the ground. While they were doing so, the victim's watch and chain and money, and anything else of value, would be skillfully taken.

THE STORE OF LARGEST ASSORTMENT

Real Savings on Furniture All of the Time Instead of 10% to 50% Reductions on Furniture Part of the Time!

WHICH SHALL IT BE:

Savings on New Furniture or Reductions on "Undesirables" That Don't Sell?

AUGUST, as you know, is the great sale month in furniture, when reductions run all the way from 10 per cent to 50 per cent.

Frankly, we do not like what we found out about the average August reduction sale.

The small reductions are usually good, but the big reductions generally apply to what is known as "undesirables" or "slow movers."

In fact, some of these August reduction sales are top-heavy with this class of furniture.

Otherwise, if the furniture is new and can be reduced 50 per cent then why was it priced so high in the first place?

Now contrast the situation at STOCK & CORDTS!

We prefer economy twelve months a year instead of a forced sale in August!

At the same time we are going to compete with every August furniture sale.

We can do it by simply leaving our prices alone!

And all that we ask is, that you shall not permit yourself to be stampeded by the hue-and-cry of 10 per cent to 50 per cent.

Come in and we will prove to you conclusively that STOCK & CORDTS' is still the lowest-priced house for quality furniture—

Even in this month of sales!

THE BLUEBIRD PRINCESS

PERHAPS if Prince Arno had been a poor youth he would not have found life such a bore and he might have married as his father the king had often asked him to do, and settle down at home.

But he was a prince, and he did not fall in love with any princess that his father had chosen, and so one day he started off on a journey, telling the king that when he found the girl he could love he would return.

The poor king was very unhappy, for he thought he should never see his son again, because if he could not love any of the beautiful princesses he had chosen for him, he was quite sure he would find none in his travels.

For many months Prince Arno traveled without seeing anyone but peasants working in the fields, and then one day, just as it was growing dark, he spied far in from the road where he was traveling a castle brightly lighted.

Turning his horse into the path, he rode up to the door, but what was his surprise when he reached the castle to see the light suddenly go out and all the windows dark.

But as he was a brave prince he dismounted and boldly walked up to the door and knocked. A bent-over, witch-like creature answered his knock, holding a flickering candle in her hand.

"Can I find shelter here for the night?" inquired the prince.

"Enter if you wish," replied the witch. "If you care to remain, you are welcome; but no traveler thus stayed here long, I warn you."

She led him to a room, where, by the candle light, Prince Arno saw a broken-down bed in one corner. "This is all I can offer. If you care to remain, you are welcome," she said.

Prince Arno told her he would sleep there that night, after he had made his horse comfortable under the trees. It did not take the prince long to fall asleep, in spite of his strange surroundings, for he had traveled far that day. How long he slept he did not know, but when he woke the sound of music fell upon his ears.

Softly opening the door, he looked upon a strange sight. A room full of beautiful maidens dressed in blue were dancing and swaying to the music, though where the light came from or the music he could not make out.

Prince Arno knew he must be in an enchanted castle and that some strange spell was upon the place, and he was determined to find out something about it.

"Hold!" he cried, rushing into the midst of the dancing group, and at the same time he caught one of the beautiful maidens by her arm.

In an instant the scene had changed. Not a maiden was there. The light had gone and the music streamed through the windows. Prince Arno saw that he held by one wing a poor, struggling, frightened bluebird.

Just then the door opened, and in came the old witch. "You have rescued our princess," she said. "Now, if you are brave enough you can save her and restore her to her former shape."

"And what am I to do to break the spell that holds her?" inquired the prince.

The old witch touched with her cane the bare fireplace, and instantly there blazed a bright fire. "Throw her into the fire," she said.

"This was not easy for the prince to do, for he was a kind-hearted man and could not bear to give pain to anyone. "You hesitate?" said the witch. "They all do; no one has been brave enough to cast the bluebird into the flames."

Prince Arno hesitated no longer. If this was the way the spell was to be broken the bird must be sacrificed, and into the flames he threw the bird.

But instead of being burned, out of the fire there arose a beautiful maiden, the most beautiful Prince Arno had ever seen, dressed in a gown the color of the flames, as though they had wrapped themselves about her.

Prince Arno's heart told him he had found the bride he sought, and the old witch explained that she was a princess that had fallen under the spell of a wicked ogre, who had changed her into a bluebird, to remain one until a prince should rescue her in the way he had done.

"I could only break the spell that held her at midnight," said the witch, "and then only for an hour, when all the bluebirds around could be changed into maidens."

The next day Prince Arno took the princess with him to his father and the king gave a grand feast that lasted for a week to celebrate the marriage of his heir.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

FEET TO THE EAST

IN MANY old graveyards in this country the graves are so placed that the body lies with its feet to the east. This is a form of orientation and a manner of burying still generally followed in Europe. Of this Elworthy says: "It may well be maintained that all our modern notions included in the general term orientation are but survivals of the once universal sun-worship." He regards "our still observed custom of burying our dead with the feet toward the East" as one which, though originating in heathen times, is not to be regarded as being still "an act of idolatrous sun-worship," but as having been changed into a pious custom of religious significance. He adds: "Among the aboriginal Australians who are still cannibals the graves have a direction from east to west and the foot of the grave is toward the rising sun."

The whole subject of orientation has received much attention from learned writers and there is a considerable literature on the subject. Though all agree that its origin was in sun-worship yet on other points the authorities are not all agreed. For that matter neither, apparently, were the heathen. For awhile the Egyptians built their temples so that they opened toward the east, allowing the beams of the rising sun to enter and gild the statues placed at the west end, Clement of Alexandria says that in general the altars and images of the pagan temples were placed at the east end and the temple opened to the west. And all alike were sun-worshippers.

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

MIRIAM

THE exquisite name of Miriam seems to be a predecessor of Mary. It, too, signifies "bitter," and comes from the Hebrew word mirah, which has that translation. But Miriam, according to the Scriptures, antedates Mary. Miriam first named the sister of Moses and Aaron, who led the sons of the Israelites when they saw their enemies dead upon the seashore. It was not repeated until after the captivity when it took the Greek forms of Mariam and Marianne, and became much used by Jewish women. The Asmodean princess in whom the brave Macabean line was extinguished by Herod the Great, was called Mariam. Later it is found designating the poor soul who is cited as having fulfilled the most terrible of all the woes denounced by Moses upon the daughters of Jerusalem.

Miriam was one time the name by which the Blessed Virgin herself was called, and it also named two popular saints: the Magdalen and the Penitent of Egypt. Marianne, the derivative, is sufficiently important to be discussed separately at a later date. The pearl is Miriam's talismanic gem. Its legacy of tears will be set aside for Miriam, for whom it will bring sweetness, charm and true friendships. Monday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

Lowered Record With Ackerman

Road System Delays Traffic

YOUTH TIPS "CRIME CAREER"; IS JAILED

Budding Holdup Is Altogether Too Trustful

Hotter Bred at Saugerties Farms First to Lower a World's Record in 1924—Mile in 2:02 1/4.

As the first trotter to lower a world's record in 1924, Etta Druten, bred by Saugerties Farms, has made herself one of the season's outstanding figures by her performance at the Columbus, Ohio, Grand Circuit Meetings. Six years ago Bertha Ma. (4) 2:04 1/4 owned by Saugerties Farms and trained and driven by Townsend Ackerman, the farms trainer, broke the world's record and set it at 2:04 1/4. A month later it was lowered to 2:02 1/4 by Miss Bertha Dillon and remained at that figure till the recent meeting. Her record is only 1/4 of a second slower than that of Peter Volo (2:02) but he secured his record in a match race against Leo Awworthy (1:58 1/4) and not in a large field of horses such as she defeated in her record-breaking mile.

Her mile in 2:02 1/4 is one full second faster than any mile trotter in competition last year outside the free for all trots. Favourite (2:03 1/4) the leading money winner, and Cupid's Albion (2:03 1/4) were the only ones that trotted in 2:03 1/4. She is also the first trotter in history, the daughter of a sire and dam both with seasonally fast records, that has taken a faster record herself.

It is also the fastest mile ever trotted as early as July 8 by any trotter of either sex in history. She was foaled in Kentucky but was given all her education and raced as a two and three year old by Townsend Ackerman. Her brilliant showing in the Kentucky Futurity in which she made three champions trot to their records to defeat her will always be remembered by all who witnessed the struggle for supremacy. T. W. Murphy purchased her for this season's stake races for W. H. Hagan of New York city, for the sum of $25,000, as she appeared to be one of the best trotters in training. A week after the Futurity, Ackerman drove her to a record of 2:04, the world's record for green three year old trotting fillies and only 1/4 of a second slower than the world's record of 2:03 3/4 for green trotting mares held by Gull Curci (2:03 3/4). Her sire is Etawah (2:03) a Kentucky Futurity winner and who was a champion in his day, and her dam is Margaret Druten, largest money winner of 1914.

SERVICES SUNDAY AT KUMVILLE AND LYONSVILLE
Seba Grunstra of Passaic, N. J., has been appointed to take charge of the Reformed Church services in these places. The services are 11:00 a. m. and 2:30 p. m., respectively, and all members of the community are invited.

The State Highway Department has under construction at the present time a stretch of road between Rhinecliff and Poughkeepsie. Instead of adopting the old policy of blocking off the road under construction, establishing a detour, and sending automobilists either through a field or around a country road and causing them a great deal of discomfort, the highway department is employing the system in almost universal use by which the highway is blocked in such a manner as to establish a one-way road. In order to avoid accidents, signalmen are placed at both the northern and southern ends of the road under construction, who see to it that traffic is only moving one way at a time.

Criticism has been made of the system, however, because of the fact that traffic is held up for such a long period of time at each end of the road. This causes a great amount of delay and also causes quite a large number of people to miss the trip of the Rhinebeck-Kingston ferry that they desire to make. On Saturday afternoon of last week traffic was held up at the southern end of the road until 60 automobiles were waiting to pass. This not only inconvenienced a great many people but also caused a great deal of congestion at the Rhinebeck-Kingston ferry. This condition might be remedied if the signalmen instead of waiting for 60 cars to line up on either end of the road would permit 10 cars or less to go through at a time.

KUMVILLE.

Kumville, July 31.—Simon Merrihew and family, accompanied by the Rev. and Mrs. Grunstra, spent Monday in Kingston.

John Barringer and son are gathering hay on the Beverley farm.

Harold Davis and family were callers at the home of Linus Lockwood on Monday.

Gardner Donohue is drawing coal for parties at Ashokan.

SAMSONVILLE.

Samsonville, July 31.—There will be a lawn party at Horace Myers's on Thursday evening, August 7, for the benefit of the Samsonville M. E. Church. Refreshments of ice cream, cake, lemonade, etc., will be on sale and a good social time is anticipated. Everybody welcome.

Maudie Shurtz came home from Kingston on Monday very much improved, but is ordered to keep quiet. Mrs. Phoebe Lawrence is at her home in Accord taking a much needed vacation.

Mrs. W. G. Moore has city boarders. The Palen bungalow near the village is occupied.

Several persons were glad to receive cards from Edna Davis. Some old friends were out to church on Sunday.

Chicago.—To him! An enterprising young holdup man simply doesn't know whom to trust these days.

Take the case of James Allen. James resides at 507 West Madison street and is twenty-one. James is ambitious. He reads the crime news and even keeps a scrap book. Some day, he hopes to see his own lurid exploits recorded in type.

James, however, is a trusting soul. Had he not been, he doubtless would have thought twice before he strolled up to an unknown young man of about his own age at the corner of Madison and Jefferson streets the other night and began to unburden his suppressed desires.

"See," he said, "I've got a gun and everything." James displayed a revolver, which he had concealed by the novel means of hanging it down his back with a strap. Then he produced his clippings.

"It's easy," he boasted. "See all these jobs. I was in on all of 'em." The stranger appeared properly impressed.

"Tell you what," said James, "you come back at 11:30 and we'll pull something."

The stranger kept his promise, but with him came Policeman McNamara of the Dearborn street station. James today is in a cell.

"Just a kid," the police say, "who thinks he's a hard egg."

Thirteen to Death, Is Justice's Verdict

Fort Worth, Tex.—Thirteen was an unlucky number for U. B. Craig. At 8:13 o'clock Friday, the 13th, he was killed by an interurban train running between Dallas and Fort Worth.

When the inquest was conducted by a justice of the peace it was discovered that in his pocketbook he had 13 cents and a rabbit's foot.

A poll tax receipt was found on his person. The receipt was issued in 1921, which added together, totals 13. The man's age was forty-nine, which also totals 13. He lived on the 1300 block of a Fort Worth street and his voting precinct was numbered 53, also totaling 13.

The justice of the peace, after announcing his verdict, added the following to the coroner's report: "It is also my opinion that the deceased was thirteen to death."

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company announces an offering to customers and local investors in the Central Hudson Valley of $1,194,400—7% Cumulative Preferred Stock of the UNITED HUDSON ELECTRIC CORPORATION.

Of the above amount the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company owns $827,400 par value representing the amount received in payment for certain property turned over to the United Hudson Electric Corporation and for funds advanced for construction purposes at the time of the organization of the latter Company in 1919, by authority of the Public Service Commission. This stock has since been held by the Company in its Investment Account and is now being offered to the public in order to provide funds for new construction work to meet the demands of its Customers.

The balance of $367,000 represents the amount recently asked for by the United Hudson Electric Corporation in a petition to the Public Service Commission to cover the cost of construction and extensions into new territory and is being offered for the account of the latter Company. It is expected that this petition will be approved at an early date and the $367,000 of stock is accordingly offered subject to such authorization.

The Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company controls and operates the United Hudson and its subsidiary companies. The management is the same throughout. This group of companies known as the Central Hudson System serves practically every important community in the Central Hudson Valley with gas or electric service, or both.

The generating and transmission properties of the United Hudson Company are an integral part of the system through which the Management has been enabled to tie in the various plants and distributing systems to create new economies and under unified management to standardize the service as well as to greatly increase the business.

Interconnection with other utilities has made possible the interchange of electric current for emergency purposes and also the bringing into the territory of large blocks of power from the most economical sources.

This Preferred Stock is offered by the Management of the Central Hudson System as a sound security both as to value and stability of earnings. It is offered at par, the price at which it was issued, and may be purchased for cash, or under our Customer-Thrift plan of one-twentieth down and one-twentieth per month. The full 7% will be allowed on all instalment payments from the time they are made.

Further information may be obtained at the local office of any of the Central Hudson System companies.

U. S. YEARLY FIRE LOSS NOW IN EXCESS OF $500,000,000

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift

A preliminary survey recently completed shows that, according to reports made to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, the destruction of property by fire in the United States during 1923 was $508,000,000. This figure is based on reports of 406,000 fire insurance claims, amounting to $406,000,000 to which 25 per cent has arbitrarily been added to cover uninsured and unreported losses.

These figures do not include forest fire losses, and, inasmuch as they represent largely the burning of buildings, they mean that for every ten new buildings erected in this country one is destroyed by fire. The best authorities agree that 75 per cent of fires in this country originate in preventable causes, and it may therefore be set down that last year through sheer carelessness we burned more than $375,000,000 worth of buildings. For every fifteen new buildings erected one was needlessly destroyed.

Herein lies one of the most impressive lessons of our day on the need of thrift. And this point has special bearing on the greater need for thrift education.

A more alert and intelligent general understanding of the value of being careful and systematic would save our country millions of dollars annually which, if saved, would be reflected in lower rents and lower general living costs.

And there is a more important aspect of this matter still, namely, the loss of human life and the permanent crippling of thousands of persons as a result of our national carelessness in the matter of fires.

The saving of life and protection of property through the exercise of greater care and more systematic and scientific methods of fire prevention are of so much importance to our nation that every possible means should be employed to arouse public cooperation.

It is a mark of national thriftlessness that our annual fire losses run in excess of half a billion dollars.

Preferred Stock Offered Public

Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company Will Use Proceeds for New Construction Work—Offer Open to Customers and Local Investors.

The Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company, pursuing its policy of disposing of its securities and those of its allied companies in the communities served, has announced an offering of seven per cent preferred stock to the United Hudson Electric Corporation amounting to $1,194,400, to its customers and local investors.

The sale will begin at once and will continue until the entire amount is disposed of. All but $367,000 of this stock is now owned by the Central Hudson Company, and has been held in its investment account. The stock was taken by the Central Hudson Company in 1913 upon the organization of the United Hudson Company, in payment for certain property, turned over to the latter company, and for funds advanced for construction work. It is now offered to the public to provide funds with which to carry forward new construction work of the Central Hudson Company.

The United Hudson Electric Corporation recently petitioned the public service commission for authority to issue $367,000 additional stock. This has been added to the amount held by the Central Hudson Company, and makes up the total of $1,194,400.

The position of the United Hudson Company in the Central Hudson system, is interesting. It owns the entire outstanding capital stock of the Kingston Gas & Electric Company, which in turn owns the entire capital stock of the Ulster Electric Light, Heat and Power Company at Saugerties, and of the Upper Hudson Electric & Railroad Company, operating the gas and electric properties at Catskill. The latter company has recently been granted permission to merge with the Atlantic Light and Power Company, operating in Ravena and Coeymans and New Baltimore.

The United Hudson Company owns and operates the great transmission system which links the various companies together and includes also the Hifton water powers. It has recently acquired the Honk Falls Company and the Rondout Power Company, which are now a part of the system.

The Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company in turn contracts and operates the United Hudson Company. The management is the same throughout. The Central Hudson Company will sell the additional issue, subject to approval of the public service commission, at the same time it offers the stock which has been held in its investment account.

In its announcement the Central Hudson Company calls attention to the fact that the stock is to be sold at par, that it is preferred as to dividends and assets and that it can

New Physical Director for Y. W.

Announcement is made at the Y. W. C. A. that Miss Irene Redman of Manchester, N. H., has been secured as physical director for the coming year, to succeed Miss Margaret Pastmore. The latter came to the association for one year and is returning to Northwestern University in the fall to complete her course in physical education.

Miss Redman comes to the association very highly recommended. She is a graduate of the Sargent School of Physical Education and during her senior year was head of her dormitory. For the past two years she has been director of the health education department of the Y. W. C. A. at Nashua, N. H. She is an excellent swimming instructor and is authorized by the Red Cross to conduct both junior and senior life saving classes. She is well qualified to carry on the gymnasium and to give corrective and individual instruction. Is an excellent leader of recreation, a teacher of aesthetic dancing and has marked ability as a dramatic coach. The local Y. W. C. A. feels that it is particularly fortunate to have secured Miss Redman as a member of its staff.

It is expected that Miss Redman, who is this summer the recreation leader at Camp Wakanahit, Amherst, N. H., will come to the association soon after September 1.

Cuckoo Superstitions

There are numerous superstitions associated with the hearing of the cuckoo's first call. In the maritime Highlands and Hebrides, if the cuckoo is first heard by one who has not broken his fast, some misfortune is expected. Indeed, besides the danger, it is considered a reproach to one to have heard the cuckoo while hungry. In France to hear the cuckoo for the first time fasting is to make the hearer "an idle do nothing for the rest of the year," or "to numb his limbs" for the same period. There is a similar belief in certain parts of the west of England. In Northumberland one is told, if walking on a hard road when the cuckoo first calls, that the ensuing season will be full of calamity; to be on soft ground is a lucky omen.

Perspiration of Dogs

Dogs sweat or perspire very little. The physiological purpose of perspiration seems to be the regulation of the temperature of the body. But in the case of the dog, as well as many other animals, the body temperature is regulated by respiration. After running a dog breathes more rapidly. This has the same cooling effect as sweating would have.

Donald MacMillan, Arctic explorer on the schooner Bowdoin, has left his winter quarters and reached a point 137 miles south of Ellsmere land on his return to the United States. According to London papers, developments in Greece point to the restoration of a monarchy, and the ex-king George, now in England, is quoted as saying it will only be a matter of a short time before he is recalled to Athens. It is reported in Ottawa, Canada, that a syndicate headed by Charles M. Schwab will buy the $31,000,000 properties of the British-American Nickel Company, which recently went into liquidation. Mrs. Laura H. Fleischmann, wife of the multi-millionaire "great king," of Cincinnati, O., and New York, has secured a Paris divorce. It is reported she will wed Jay O'Brien, ex-husband of Mae Murray, film star, and of Irene Fenwick, actress.

THE BANKER

The banker is a business man but, at the same time, he is a public servant. He manages his institution to earn dividends for its stockholders, but it has now come to be regarded as his duty to give sound advice and perform many services which result in no direct addition to his earnings account. He accepts the deposits of the parents for the account of the babe when it is born. He keeps the funds and invests them as the child grows. He advises the young man when, in leaving school, he enters business. His counsel is given with financial assistance as the business develops. When his client retires from its management he acts as trustee in handling his investments and finally upon the client's death, he is called upon to administer the estate and act as an advisor to the heirs. A knowledge gained from books is a necessary part of his preparation but he needs many things which he cannot learn in that way—greatest among them, an understanding of human nature—Clarence R. Chaney, President American Institute of Banking.

The Eau Claire County Bankers Association, Wisconsin, appointed an agricultural committee early in May. Plans are now under way to adopt definite farming projects for the county in line with the projects adopted by the state bankers agricultural committee in co-operation with the College of Agriculture. This is the start of the organization of Wisconsin counties in the banker-farmer movement.

Millions Claims In Knauth Case

The large number of persons in Ulster county who had important transactions with the International banking firm of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, who failed in January, 1923, for upwards of twelve millions of dollars, will be interjected in the statement which has appeared in the New York newspapers that, schedules filed in the Federal court put the total liabilities at $12,800,438 and the assets at $10,492,510. The firm went into the hands of a receiver and its financial troubles were said to have resulted from the decline of the German mark and unfortunate ventures in oil. A feature of the failure was that many tourists were traveling abroad with checks drawn by the firm on European bankers. Foreign banking concerns figure prominently as unsecured creditors.

Among the secured creditors appears the so-called Peyton-Perkins group, the amount due being placed at $2,681,871, which some of the creditors thought was an investment in the business and which made George W. Perkins and William C. Peyton partners and subject to its liabilities. The group held securities as collateral. The courts were left to decide whether Peyton and Perkins were partners in the firm or creditors.

Included in the assets, according to the schedules, are $5,036,689 in accounts, $4,295,357, stock and bonds; cash, $443,255; unliquidated claims, $402,785, and negotiable notes, $115,448.

Those listed as secured creditors, besides the Peyton-Perkins group, are the American Exchange National Bank, $250,000; Bank of Nova Scotia, $300,000; Central Union Trust Company, $200,000; Guaranty Trust Company, $300,000; National Bank of Commerce, $200,000; Equitable Trust Company, $100,000; National Park Bank, $200,000; Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company, $100,000.

It was disclosed that there are pending claims against the firm's membership in the Stock Exchange and the Curb Market totaling $75,600. The book value of the Stock Exchange seat is given at $90,000 and the Curb membership at $7,500. The New York courts referred to Judge Clearwater as sole referee to hear and determine the question whether the members of the Peyton-Perkins and Freeman group were partners of the firm or creditors. The judge began the hearing in the court room of the new Bar Association building in New York city, on the 26th of May, took testimony four days in each week until, including the 3rd day of July, when the evidence was closed. Among the important law firms of New York which appeared in the case were Rushmore, Bisbee & Stern; Hawkins, Delafield and Longfellow; Davies, Auerbach & Cornell; Moore, Hall, Swan & Cunningham; Curtis, Mallett-Prevost & Colt; George W. Elkins; Auston G. Fox and Albert de Roodts; Englehard, Pollak, Pitcher & Stern. Judge Clearwater was asked by a Freeman reporter this morning whether he had determined the question referred to him. He said he had not and probably would not be able to do so until some time in September.

A black crepe satin tunic dress had corn-colored chiffon set in its deeply cut V neck, in an interesting draped throat. Ruffles of the chiffon fell over the hands and extended up the seam to the elbow.

At a smart restaurant a few nights ago the display of Spanish shawls was extraordinary.

Dresses opening up the front and disclosing a contrasting material from either bust or neckline to hem appear everywhere.

The Japanese Garden of the Ritz one day this week indicated a general acceptance of large straw hats, of tunics and of prints.

Guests at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, testified to the general acceptance of the scarf, the tunic, and the belted dress; also to the fur-collared straight-line coat. During the dinner hour black lace and net gowns and turquoise blue and green dominated.

Both colored flannel dresses and striped silk ones were noted around Montreal, small felt hats usually being affected.

Plaid taffeta scarfs, not always in clan tartans, were also very much worn in Montreal.

While the cotton dress does not register as a style item, volles and checked gingham were liberally dotted over the areas covered by a motor trip through Quebec. Orange and yellow tones were particularly popular.

A wide shawl collar of Renaissance lace was the sole and most effective ornamentation on a beltless straight-line black frock of heavy flat crepe.

Alternate strips of flit and Irish laces fashioned an ecru collar pointed on the left side, but extending into a more than waist deep panel in the back. The plain black frock, on which it was worn, was belted in with the panels at the hips.

Deep panels of lace, both back and front, were worn by a fair shopper over a dark blue dress.

A "high standing" lingerie collar edged with lace was loosely held in position by inch-wide velvet ribbon and then frilled out in ruff fashion, forming a frame for a delicate chin. The cuffs to match repeated the idea.

Round collars edged with deep headings of Irish or flit lace through which black, brown, or navy velvet ribbon is slipped, are seen here and there on younger girls. (Fairchild Fashion Service.)

WHEN INDIAN FISHES ITS WORK, NOT SPORT

Naturally Lazy, He Uses the Sare and Simple Method.

He has three ways of doing it—with a gill-net, with a dip-net, and with a gaff-hook. The familiar hook and line of the white man he scorns as being too slow and entailing too much hard work. What the Indian wants is the fish. He cares nothing about the sport of the thing, nor the thrill of landing a 12-pound beauty with an eight-ounce rod and a slender silk line; leave that to the crazy white man who has nothing else to do. The Indian wants the fish, and the easier he can get them the better he likes it, and the more time he has for sleep. His favorite way of catching salmon is by the use of the gill-net, since this method leaves him the maximum amount of time for his previously mentioned sleep. A gill-net is a straight piece of netting about twelve feet long and five or six feet wide. One side has wooden floats and the other heavy leaden weights, so it will hang perpendicular in the water. On either end is a stone anchor to keep it stretched out.

Setting the net is an easy process. He chooses an eddy or a deep pool in the river and floats by in his canoe, with the net piled in the stern. When the proper spot is reached, he kicks one of the anchors overboard. This settles to the bottom of the river and pulls the net out over the stern as the canoe floats leisurely on. When all the net is out of the canoe, he kicks the other anchor overboard and his work is done. His labors over for the day, the Indian wends his homeward way and sinks into repose until tomorrow, leaving the net to catch his meal, says Adventure Magazine.

The water of the Nookachuck river is never very clear; usually, it is muddy. This makes it hard for the salmon to see, and thereby brings about their undoing. They swim around in the eddies and pools in search of food and, if a net is there, they are sure to run into it head-first in the course of a day or two. The meshes of the net are not quite large enough to let an average-sized salmon through. He gets half-way through, and then tries to back out. As he backs out, the meshes of the net catch under his gills and he stays there till the owner of the net pulls him out.

Next day the Indian comes back in his canoe and pulls the net up, usually finding four or five salmon in it. These he either takes home or hides under a log so he can tell his wife where to find them. With this supply of fish, he betakes himself to rest and does not stir abroad again for a week or so, or until such time as his larder is empty.

Only Campfire Smoke

At the recent state G. A. R. encampment in Frankfort, the annual campfire was the big public event and created much interest. The meeting was held in Howard hall, the Frankfort High school gymnasium.

One woman who lives a short distance from the hall did not attend. Her husband returned home about nine o'clock, while the gathering was still in session, and as he opened the front door, remarked: "I smell smoke, something must be burning." His wife looked up from the book she was reading. "I've been smelling that," she said. And then a light spread over her face and with all seriousness she said: "Oh, I know. It's the campfire."—Indianapolis News.

How This Fish Walks

As waters inhabited by climbing perch dry up, the existing puddles become overstocked, and the fish leave their old home, says Nature Magazine. They depart by hundreds, traveling over the land, scattering in all directions. Then the gill covers are fully extended and the pectoral fins spread out. The former are bent outward like a joint, the pointed ends seeking a firm hold; by a twisting and turning movement of the body the creature is jerked forward. Then the spines of the gill covers again seek a firm hold in this way the climbing perch is able to move quite rapidly. If the fish do not find water, they will dig themselves into the mud and can be found at a depth of one and a half feet.

Plant Almost Human

Operating without human control, halting while minor difficulties are adjusted and stopping altogether if something goes seriously wrong, a new electric power station at Searsburg, Vt., embodies astonishing mechanical intelligence, says Popular Science Monthly.

The turbine of the plant drives a generator with a capacity of 5,500 horsepower. The only help from human beings is occasional inspection, lubrication and regulation of the governor mechanism. The turbine starts when sufficient water arrives and shuts down when the flow falls below an efficient limit.

Pulp From Alanthus

Officials of the United States forest products laboratory, in Madison, Wis., announce the discovery of what is declared to be an excellent and valuable pulp wood from the alanthus tree, otherwise known as the "Tree of Heaven." Officials, after laboratory tests, say that it developed into a high grade of book paper, also fit for use in the manufacture of lithograph and writing paper. The alanthus was imported from China into Pennsylvania and New York, where it rapidly is becoming a weed and a menace.

How Some Birds "Nest"

Martins and wrens, which once made their homes in hollow trees exclusively, now prefer the bird boxes erected by kindly human beings when they can find those that have not been used by the English sparrow.

The whippoorwill, night hawk and all of their family make no nest, but deposit their eggs directly on the ground or upon the dead leaves which cover it.

The little Parula warbler makes its nest almost invisible by placing it in the midst of a bunch of moss, near some tree from which it is practically indistinguishable.—Nature Magazine.

Tied Up for Life

The man of the house in name only mopped the bald spot in front where his forehead should have been and gazed with intense hatred at his wife a few steps ahead. It seemed evident that he was about to divulge a confidence, and the hotel clerk leaned toward him with a friendly, expectant glance.

The grumbling one came nearer to the clerk and said: "When I got married her folks told me not to do it. Said it was a misalliance and we wouldn't stay together a week. Misalliance nothing! I've been married twenty years and I can't even get out for one night!"—Prize story in Judge.

Asperity Shown In Fallon Trial

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, July 31.—Frequent interruptions from the bench again today marked the trial of William J. Fallon, criminal lawyer, on trial for jury bribing before Federal Judge George W. McClintic.
Joseph L. Pami was a witness and the defendant was conducting cross-examination. Pami is owner of the restaurant where, it is alleged, Fallon met Charles W. Rendigs, juror in the Durrell-Gregory mail fraud cases and gave him money to use his influence for a verdict favorable to the Gregorys.
Judge McClintic, in limiting the scope of the cross-examination said: "The court has allowed the defendant a great deal of latitude. More than is right in fact. The defendant must confine his questions to the issue of the case."
His comment was occasioned when Fallon asked Pami whether he had sold liquor to certain persons.
"We respectfully except," Fallon replied sarcastically.
Fallon then attempted to bring out that Pami had said he was threatened with injunction proceedings to close his place if he did not testify in the jury bribing trial.
The witness replied "no" to each question, but Fallon produced papers, which, he said, proved such proceedings were pending. The court held them for examination as to their admissibility as evidence.
Fallon produced a letter which he said he obtained from United States Attorney Hayward's office by subpoena dated October 8, 1923. This letter, written by Charles W. Rendigs, whom Fallon is accused of bribing, refers to a meeting Rendigs had with Colonel Hayward. Rendigs said he had given considerable thought to what had taken place in the office and that he was entirely innocent of any wrongdoing.
Harry B. Telfair, a broker, testified as to occurrences in McGee's apartment in Seventy-fifth street the night of November 12, 1922. Fallon tried to show that Edward M. Fuller and W. Frank McGee, who pleaded guilty to bucking, drank liquor at Governor's Island, where they were held. Judge McClintic ruled out the question.
Judge McClintic warned an unnamed spectator that contempt of court proceedings would be brought against him if he didn't quit sneering and laughing. Penalty would be from thirty to sixty days in the Tombs, the judge said.

Fleeing Before Forest Fires

By Telegram to The Freeman.
San Francisco, Cal., July 31.—With a wall of flame on two sides and rapidly closing the gap on the third side, the town of Floriston, in the Truckee Canyon, was reported deserted today as its 250 inhabitants fled before the advancing forest fire with their portable belongings. Only a fortunate change of wind was expected to save the sixty-five cottages making up the little paper mill town.
Forest fires were burning from the Klamath national forest on the north to the San Jacinto mountains on the south, according to reports to the United States Forestry Service. Two lives have been lost to date in the battle against the flames, one man being crushed beneath a giant rock which rolled on him while on the fire line, and another was killed by a falling tree.

Persia Promises Vigorous Action

Anxious to Make Reparations for Murder of American Consul—Would Send His Body Here by Warship if She Had One.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, July 31.—Smarting under the threat of the breaking off of diplomatic relations because of the killing of Robert Imbrie, American vice consul at Teheran, the Persian government informed the United States in a formal note today that extreme and vigorous efforts were being made to pursue and punish the slayers of the American diplomat.
The note was handed to Joseph S. Korfeldt, American minister to Persia and cabled by him to the state department.
"The imperial government," said the Persian minister of foreign affairs, "is making extreme efforts to pursue and punishing the persons who caused and perpetrated the killing of Mr. Imbrie and it will not hesitate to take any kind of steps in this connection."
So desirous is the Persian government of making reparations for the death of the American consul, the note stated, that the body would be taken to the United States by a Persian battleship if the country had such a vessel. But Persia has no navy.
Many of the persons who were either suspected or were accused of committing the crime have, regardless of the class to which they belong, been arrested the note said.
"Other persons who participated in this connection," said the Persian minister, "as a result of the vigorous efforts of the government, have been apprehended and the culprits will receive drastic punishment after their trial."
"I also feel it again necessary to give you my assurance that the Persian government is extremely desirous of repairing the regrettable incident," the Persian note said.

Incident Well Called

Impossible, but True
Most persons can remember at least one startling coincidence in their experience. The elder J. Pierpont Morgan liked to tell of one lucky encounter he had while he was seeking a pair of vases to complete a set of Sevres table decorations on which he had set his heart. Collectors had been ransacking Europe for them in Mr. Morgan's behalf, and then one stormy night—as Mrs. J. Borden Harriman tells the story in "From Pinaro to Politics"—he arrived in London from Liverpool, having come from America without warning the servants when to expect him.
As he ran up the steps and put his latch key to the door a shivering figure in the vestibule drew two vases from under a torn coat and murmured, "I've been going from house to house all day; won't you buy these, sir? My children are starving."
The light from the half-opened door fell on what seemed to be porcelain from the famous set. While the man waited Mr. Morgan rushed upstairs to compare the marks. They seemed the same, but it wasn't possible!
"How much do you want for them?" he demanded when he came down.
The man asked a small price, took the money and melted away into the night.
The next day all the London connoisseurs were at Morgan's house, exclaiming, "It's impossible, but true!" The vases matched, and the set was priceless.
"I wasn't expected in London," said Mr. Morgan. "The man didn't know what Sevres was worth. I never could trace him. How did it happen? Out of all London to come to my house and at that moment!"—Youth's Companion.

Chicago Slayers Consider Their Only Disgrace Is to Have Aliens Thus Describe Them—More Serious Than Murder They Committed.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Criminal Court Building, Chicago, July 31.—A calendar hangs in the cell of Dick Loeb. Each day a pencil makes a cross in each square. Another day in court and another day in the county jail is gone.

Near it hangs another picture. It is of "Patches" Germaine Reinhardt, the girl who won't forget. "No matter what Dickie has done or when he'll come out, I'll be waiting for him. And I'll be his friend no matter what everyone else does." Patches thus pledged herself recently.

"Babe" and "Dickey" were in particularly happy frame of mind today. If they were posing it was masterful piece of acting.

Don't Think of Noose.

In the several hours that elapsed between their jail breakfast and the opening of court they chatted freely with their fellow prisoners and with reporters. Dick's spirits were even sufficiently sublime to move him to break into song.

Ma is playing Mah Jongs.

"Dad is busy, too—
And so on down through the hitting, rollicking tune. They hummed with all the careless abandon of two youths on the campus which they so lately left instead of two young men in an unenviable fix with either hangman's noose or life imprisonment staring them in the face.

Only Blow to Pride.

They have a natural desire to see the state defeated in its effort to keep the alienists off the stand. They like to see the state defeated wherever possible but on the other hand they do not relish being painted to the world as having "diseased minds." That is a blow to their pride. They have been widely advertised as being "intellectuals" and possessed of "remarkable minds," and they like it.

For the alienists to cloud their almost "perfect crime" by describing it as the child of abnormal, diseased and otherwise irregular brains does not at all fit in with their adopted pose as scientific, cold blooded, young intellectuals who conceived a brilliant, criminal plan and carried it out with skill and daring.

Their Idea of Disgrace.

The foregoing, according to mystified relatives, represents the attitude of these two remarkable young slayers. They talked gravely of the "disgrace" and the "stigma" of being described as "mentally diseased." To them, it apparently was more serious than the "stigma and disgrace" of having committed perhaps the most cold blooded and brutal crime in American criminology, a crime with no motive other than "the thrill of it."

"They seem actually to believe," said one member of the family, "that they will be disgraced by being termed as 'mentally diseased.' The idea that anyone knows more about them than they know themselves is repugnant to them. They think they know more about themselves than anyone else can possibly know."

Immediately following announcement of the investigation the Grain Marketing Company was asked to furnish "complete and detailed auditors' report on each of the merged companies on the business done in the past five years."

Officials of the Grain Marketing Company said they would be glad to give any information wanted.

Candidate Davis

Democratic Nominee Returns From Vacation With Preliminary Draft of Acceptance Speech to Which He May Add Section Relating to Klan Issue.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 31.—John W. Davis, Democratic presidential candidate, arrived at Grand Central Station at 10:15 o'clock this morning from the Maine woods where he had spent an enjoyable 12 day vacation and prepared the preliminary draft of his speech of acceptance.

The candidate said he "felt fine" and he looked much better than when he left. He posed for photographers and was immediately whisked to Murray Hill Hotel, where he planned to confer with his political advisers.

Davis brought back to the city the preliminary draft of his acceptance speech with an important section yet unwritten. It was understood that the missing portion was that dealing with the Klan issue.

Davis was to confer at length with Shaver and other party leaders before setting to work on this delicate point. The main question to be decided, it is understood, was whether the reference to the hooded organization should be stronger than the party platform plank regarding religious liberty.

The notification speech which Davis will finish within the next two days in general parallel the party platform, but it is hailed by those who have read it as a distinctive Davis document, with a "fearless treatment of political issues." The League of Nations and governmental corruption come in for a vigorous broadside.

Crowds along the route to New York from Maine gave torchlight demonstrations throughout the night for the candidate. The nominee and Mrs. Davis shook hands with more than 500 citizens at a reception tendered him in Rockland before his departure.

Davis made a short address in which he commented on the presence of Republicans in the gathering and said he saw no reason why it should not be so as both parties were driving to the same goal.

To a larger crowd gathered at the court house square in Bath, Maine, the candidate referred to the 100,000 in friendly spirit.

"When the election is over and done and when the choice of the people has fallen on some one of the candidates," said Davis, "shoulder to shoulder as Americans we shall join and march forward again for the welfare of our great common country."

Campaign Plans Forming.

Following a conference with Davis, Clegg Shaver, chairman of the Democratic national committee, announced today that Thomas J. Spellacy, of Hartford, Connecticut, would be regional chief of campaign activities in the eastern territory with headquarters at the Murray Hill Hotel.

Spellacy was assistant to A. Mitchell Palmer when the latter was attorney-general of the United States.

Democratic organization bureau in Washington, Shaver said, will be in charge of former Congressman Lincoln Dixon, of Indiana, and associated with him will be William B. Woodrow Wilson was president, held the labor portfolio in the cabinet.

Selection of a man to head the finance committee for the Davis Campaign, has not yet been made, Shaver said.

James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany; Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland and Lieut. Governor Lunn of New York called on Davis during the day.

It was said Davis intended conferring with Governor Al Smith of New York, tomorrow or the next day.

Chautauqua Opens Saturday

The Kingston Chautauqua under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club will present its opening program at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday afternoon on the school grounds.

The president of the Kiwanis club, H. Van Valkenburg, will make an introductory address. The program will consist of a concert by the Chautauqua Band.

On Saturday evening, "Burns of the Mountains," will tell a thrilling tale of his adventures as a feudist in the mountains of Kentucky, and his effort against the feud stamp out and the feud stamp out by means of building a college. This is the fifth anniversary of the Chautauqua movement. It was founded on the shores of Lake Chautauqua by three men, and consisted of a few weeks of lectures and concerts. Today more than 10,000 cities and towns in the United States and Canada are visited by Chautauqua, and it is recognized by such men as Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University, as the greatest agency for popular education in America.

Miss Dorothea Fitch, who will be the superintendent in charge of the Chautauqua programs, beginning on Saturday afternoon, is a graduate of Swarthmore college. She is also an artist. Miss Fitch has made several recent tours. She will give an interpretation of the well known play, "The First Year."

The Junior Chautauqua this year will be the best that has ever been presented. Junior Chautauqua was started by Dr. Paul M. Pearson, director of the Swarthmore Chautauqua Association, eleven years ago. At first it was neither understood nor appreciated. This year, however, all of the Chautauques in the United States are cooperating. The program has been worked out by experts and will be given in the same way in all of the 10,000 cities served by Chautauqua.

One interesting feature of the Junior program will be the organization of Junior town. The children will elect their own mayor, city clerk and law and order commissioners. Any child in Kingston between the ages of 6 and 14 is eligible to become a candidate for one of these offices.

TRUE INWARDNESS REVEALED BY CAR

Few Survive Trial Proclaiming Him Either Motor Gentleman or Auto Hog.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

Nothing—no psychological test or character analysis—will reveal our true inwardness more quickly and with greater certainty than the motor car. What a difference it makes! And how few of us really survive the trial which may proclaim us either a motor gentleman or an auto hog. Nothing will make the careless pedestrian a more sincere convert to "give and take" than the exhibition of uniform courtesy on the part of the driver.

Somebody has to start this movement toward better traffic conditions, as well as on the open roads. Let us, the motorists, take the initiative. There will be no doubt about the outcome.

Respect Rules of Road.

Considerate drivers do not willfully block foot crossings. They apparently recognize the right of a pedestrian to life, liberty and the pursuit of business. They slow up and stop. If necessary, to allow pedestrians to cross from curb to curb. They wait always for women and children, and even men and do not deliberately keep them standing in the middle of the street between two streams of traffic. They respect the rules of the road. And as a result, they contribute much to the safety and comfort of the public at foot.

But the thoughtless, inconsiderate, disrespectful driver does none of these things. We see him every day plunging along like an unruly drunk, cutting in front of other cars, sliding corners, neither looking to the right or left, waiting for no one. Intellectually, morally and physically this sort of driver deserves to be called an automoron—or worse.

Of course, the pedestrians are to blame, too. They are careless of the rights and even the safety of motorists and other pedestrians. Watch a crowd of men and women at the curb waiting for traffic to pass. Every second some misguided person elbow others out into the path of streaming traffic—and danger—so they themselves can hurry across the street.

What can make a "get the h—l out of my way" driver slow down to let someone cross the street? What can force an "I dare you to strike me" pedestrian to recognize the rights of others? No matter how drastic, laws alone will not turn the trick.

Nothing but the Golden Rule can ever do it. We can pass laws until the statute books pile higher than the capitol at Washington. We can blow traffic whistles until we are blue in the face; but until everybody—drivers and pedestrians alike—realize that the other fellow has as much right on earth as they—there will be unsolved traffic problems.

Take Advantage of Down Grade to Conserve Fuel

If motorists would take advantage of coasting when the opportunity offers and when it may be done with perfect safety, they could materially add to their gasoline mileage when touring.

If it is a waste of gasoline to permit your engine to idle, then it is also a waste of the precious fuel to have it running on a down grade when it is perfectly safe for one to coast with it cut off. If the grade is too long and with curves, it is not advisable to coast, because with the engine shut off the motorist lacks that perfect control of his car that he should have.

Motorists should also see to it that their carburetors are adjusted for an average mixture—not too lean nor too thick. Efficient carburetion is a distinct aid to better gasoline mileage when coupled with intelligent driving. The gas shortage is causing many a motorist to acquire what to him are new wrinkles in driving his car. And they all help.

Keep Same Pressure in Hottest Weather

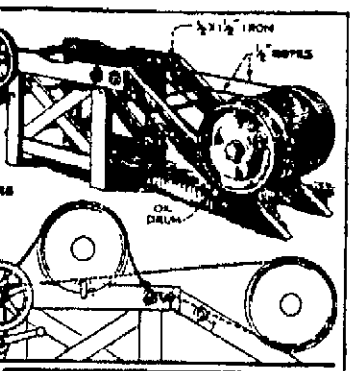

A timely warning to motorists against reducing the air pressure in their tires during the hot summer weather is now particularly opportune. This fallacy is common among motorists who do not understand that radiation carries off any surplus heat that might otherwise be dangerous to the life of a tire.

Even during the terrific grind of the race track, when tires undergo the most grueling punishment, this principle holds. It is underinflation even during the hottest days that ruins more tires than any other cause. The facts are that recommended air pressures are safe even in the summer.

By reducing pressure, the increased flexing of the tire merely creates the condition which the car owner wishes to guard against. The motorist can well afford the time needed to gauge the air pressure in his tires for the sake of greatly increased mileage.

Garage Hoist and Rack Is Handled by One Man

Oil drums in garages are usually placed on racks a few feet from the floor, but considerable difficulty is often experienced in lifting the oil drums up on the racks. A simple hoist for this purpose, which can easily be operated by one man, is shown in the illustration. It consists of a winch arrangement attached to one end of the rack. A large gear is keyed on one end of the winch and a small gear, meshing with the larger one as shown, has a handle attached so that the winch can be turned.

A Simple Barrel Hoist and Rack for the Garage That Can Be Operated by One Man.

A skid is hooked to the rack for the drums to be rolled on, which is accomplished by means of two 1/2-inch ropes, attached at one end to the winch and at the other end to the rack. These ropes must be long enough to be passed around the drum when it lies on the floor close to the skid. Winding the winch then rolls the drums up over the skid and onto the rack. The top edges of the rack are notched for the drums to rest in, so that there will be no danger of them rolling off.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Big Danger to Battery During Summer Weather

Hot weather, just like extremely cold weather, is a danger period in the life of any storage battery unless the proper care is given it. Summer weather probably is the most dangerous time the battery must pass through because the automobile is used more during this period.

Motorists as a rule are prone to forget or neglect keeping the battery filled with pure distilled water in hot weather. Evaporation of the water in the solution in the battery during hot weather is rapid. If the level of the water is permitted to reach a point below the tops of the plates, the upper portion is left exposed and useless. The covered portion of the plates are then obliged to assume the extra burden of the useless portion. This causes rapid overheating and damage not seen at the time, but which results in considerable expense later.

INFORMATION FOR THE MOTORING PUBLIC

The Wayfarer IV, official scout car of the A. A. A., considered the most completely equipped automobile in the country, arrived in Washington, D. C. the other day en route to highways of the West. A few of the instruments of this automobile are grade meter, altitude meter, thermometer, barometer, converted adding machine, oil, gas and water gauges, three buttons that completely oil the car, controls for twenty lights, memorandum pads and many other odd features. Photograph shows some of the features of the car, with numerous instruments used for accurate information for the motoring public.

Colonials Won Fourth Straight

Over Middletown Wednesday at Middletown in Ten Inning Struggle—Deegan Again Leads Schrickman Collecting Four Hits, One Going For the Circuit

A ten inning battle at Middletown between the Colonials and the Middletown State Hospital team on Wednesday afternoon went to the Colonials by a 5-4 score when McCue slammed out a long single to left center, allowing Dewey to cross the plate with the winning run. It was the Colonials' fourth straight win over the Middletown club.

After pitching nine innings on Monday against the strong Glens Falls club Mike Morgan, the Peeks-kill southpaw, was again given the assignment. Morgan pitched a good game, allowing the Middletown players eight hits. The local pitcher had one hit in the sixth when the Hospital nine scored three runs but outside of that held them well in check.

Odom was in the box for the Middletown club and the Colonials found him for thirteen safe blows. Odom however kept the blows well scattered and it was only in the third, fifth and tenth innings that the Colonials were able to score.

Deegan's Slugging.
Matty Deegan was back in the Colonial line up again on Wednesday and proceeded to make things rather interesting for the Middletown hurler. Deegan was to bat five times and the first four times up came through with a hit. The third time up the Colonial second baseman sent the ball so far out into center field that he was well on his way home before the center fielder had even recovered the ball. McCue found Hechs for three hits while Dugan and Coyne found him for two apiece.

Shay was again the leading hitter for the Middletown outfit. He made two hits out of four times at bat, one of which was a three base blow.

How They Scored.
The Colonials started the scoring for the day in the third inning. Dugan and Deegan both came through with singles and both scored when McCue slammed out a two base hit to left field. In the fifth inning Deegan's home run with Dugan on the bases gave the Colonials two more runs but after that Odom held them well in check until the tenth inning when they scored their winning run.

Bill Shay put the Middletown club in scoring position in the fifth when he opened the inning with a triple. The runner sent a long sacrifice fly to center field and Shay scored.

In the sixth inning Coyne singled and then scored when Hechs hit to right field for a triple. Gallagher, Shay and Uffers then singled in a row. Hechs and Gallagher scoring. After this inning Morgan tightened down and allowed only one hit for the next four innings of play.

"Tex" Crosby Could Throw to Keystone

Leo Browne, the former umpire, tells a good one concerning "Tex" Crosby, the veteran catcher of the Tulsa team of the Western league. Crosby was having a hard time of it with the pitchers one day. He probably had done as much work in the six innings that had been played as he would ordinarily do in nine innings.

Four pitchers had been used, and the fifth was just throwing his five balls to the catcher. Tex had caught four, and waded to the youngsters to get ready to pitch.

"That's only four," said the youngster, "and you haven't had your throw to second."

"Never mind my throw to second," answered the veteran, "I've been throwing down there for seventeen years, and ought to know where it is by this time."

HERD WITH 17 LEADS HOLE-IN-ONE STARS

J. Braid, English Golfer, Has Holed Out on Fly 11 Times.

The golf season has lengthened out to the mid-way point and yet no word has drifted in from England telling of additional hole-in-one triumphs by the venerable Sandy Herd.

It may be that the old boy is slipshod, as they say down by the gas house.

Herd is undisputedly the world's champion hole-in-one at all weights, form and distance considered. Over a space of 35 years' play the ancient Sandy has experienced the maximum golf thrill no fewer than 17 times.

The runner-up honors in the hole-in-one race probably belong to Jimmy Braid, the English star. Braid has holed out on the fly 11 times.

On the other hand, Harry Vardon, most gifted golfer of his time, and winner of six open championships, has only holed one tee shot.

Chick Evans, Chicago amateur, had probably played as much golf as any of the stars since 1900, yet it was only recently that he snared his second ace.

The most notable hole-in-one in recent years was scored by Jock Hutchison, American professional, at St. Andrews during the 1921 British open championship. This stroke of fortune moved Hutchison into a tie with Roger Wethered, young Oxford student, and in the playoff the following day the American won.

Czar of Gotham Links

Augustus Miller, supervisor of public golf courses in the Bronx, who is recognized as the "czar" of public links in New York city. He is a veteran of the game.

Golf Need Not Be Expensive Pastime
Chicago proves that golf need not be an expensive game. Of all the public and semi-public links in Chicago not a single one has lost on the investment. The greens fee is the source of revenue for these courses.

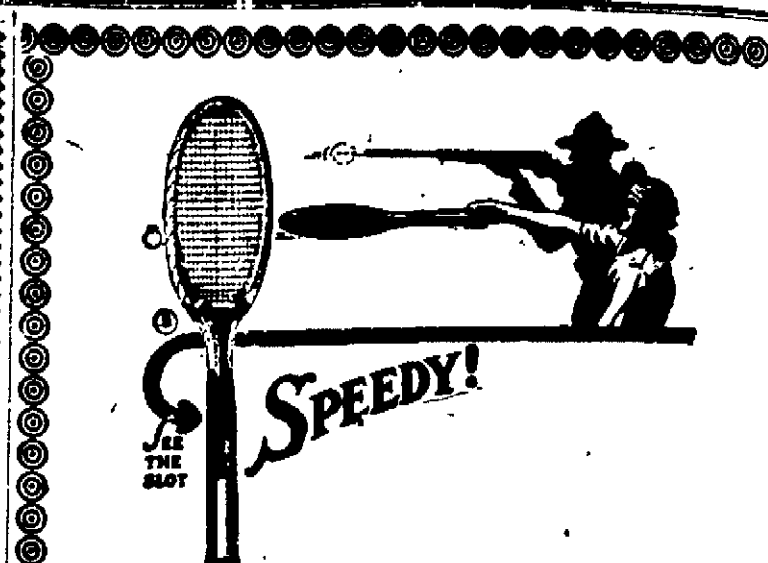

What makes golf so expensive to most of us is not golf, but the social side of the thing. Golf as a sport is cheap enough, but people are not content to take golf as a sport; they take it as a social enterprise. Magnificent clubhouses, dining rooms, service and entertainment are the things that make golf expensive.

It is not golf, but the modern stage for golf that makes it a game for the wealthy. Golf clubs are modeled after the mansions and estates of multi-millionaires. The idea is not to economize, but to expend lavishly and make a vulgar display of riches.

Miss Wills Praised by English Papers

In reviewing the Wimbledon lawn tennis tournament, the London newspaper critics declare that, despite her defeat by Miss Kathleen McKane in the final, the game displayed by the American champion, Helen Wills, justified her reputation as a great player. She was steady, daring and accurate, revealing all the qualities of a champion. Furthermore she is a better stroke maker than her conqueror, Miss McKane, and probably hit harder at times during their match than any other woman player seen at Wimbledon.

Hold the Back Straight
All you have really to do is to keep your back as straight as you can, and not to think about what is on it; above all not to boast of what is on it. The real meaning of virtue is in that straightness of the back.—Ruskin.

Semi-Finals at Seabright Today

When Howard Kinsey Plays Williams and Johnston Meets Niles—All California Final is Looked For by Experts.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Seabright, N. J., July 31.—Lucien Williams, former Yale captain and intercollegiate singles champion two years ago, furnished the only upset in the Seabright championship, defeating Harvey Snodgrass of Los Angeles in three sets. Snodgrass, who has been playing remarkable tennis since he left the coast, could not cope with his opponent's furious onslaught of drives.

Williams dropped the first set at 14-12 after being within a point of winning it no less than four times. Leading at 9-10, 15-40, with Snodgrass serving, Williams took the net position, forcing the Californian to put up a weak lob which "Babe" smashed severely. It appeared to be unreturnable, but Harvey managed to return it. Williams smashing the return out of court.

The Chicago boy lost heart at this point and the set went to Snodgrass. While Williams appeared physically tired, his playing did not reveal it and he annexed the next two stanzas 6-2, 6-4.

The elimination of Snodgrass leaves two Californians in the semi-finals for this afternoon's play. William Johnston played championship tennis yesterday, never giving Alex Thayer a chance. Thayer's game suited "Little Bill" and he drove and volleyed in real form. Thayer got but four games in the two sets and earned every one of them
